HealthE Africa is a pan-African peer-assistance networking initiative undertaken in partnership with Knowledge for Health (K4Health), with support from USAID, to raise the visibility of digital health needs, experts and projects on the continent. The initiative has been designed to meet the needs of digital health on the continent, connecting programme needs with African technology experts and service providers and fostering an environment for sharing and learning. In particular, the initiative seeks to:

- Build an understanding of the digital health context in each country
- Create and strengthen networks
- Build capacity
- Develop tools and resources

If you are interested or working on digital health on the continent, we welcome you to join the Health E Africa community and dialogue. Together we build digital health capacity in Africa.
